

SLR Employment Opportunity: Research Agronomist

About us: We are a specialist research, development and extension business working with industry leaders, organisations and new technologies. We run a project management system where the staff have the opportunity to develop their professional profile in a range of areas, including negotiation, communication with clients and growers, financials, developing research protocols, conducting all aspects of fieldwork, data analysis, reporting to clients and extension results. We can tailor your personal interests with work interests and with client personalities.

About the role: The role is based out of York, Western Australia, and is being offered as either full-time or part-time. It comes with a competitive salary and benefits.

You'll be a part of a strong and supportive team and gain exposure to diverse trials and management practices. Offers opportunities for professional development and for building strong, industry-relevant relationships, with the involvement in a wide range of research and development trials, workshops, events and other extension activities.

“Our work arrangements can suit your lifestyle”

About you: We are looking for someone who thrives in a team environment, communicates effectively, and enjoys a mix of office and field work. The ideal candidate will be eager to learn, have a strong attention to detail, and be passionate about expanding their agronomic knowledge. A genuine interest in understanding farming systems across Western Australia and a willingness to work hard and take on diverse tasks are valuable qualities for this role.

Criteria:

- Open to flexible work arrangements
- Situated preferably close to York, WA or willing to relocate for the working week
- Completed a bachelor's degree in an Agricultural related field (not compulsory if genuinely interested in the industry)
- Hold Australian working rights and a current Australian driver's licence
